First reading: Deuteronomy 18:15-20

Second reading: 1 Corinthians 7:32-35

Gospel: Mark 1:21-28

Dear Parishioners

There are situations in which whole societies, usually totalitarian, seem to be possessed by a demonic power which drives them on to places like the killing fields in Cambodia or to create the destructive machines of National Socialism which lead to Dachau and its incinerators. Such societies have been taken over by a dominating diabolic power.

This is how St. Mark sees the world into which Jesus comes. It was not neutral ground but occupied by Satan. The Messiah will have to be involved in this cosmic battle. The whole Gospel is shaped in these terms.

In our sophisticated society we may be embarrassed with all this talk of demons and Satan. Surely, we have moved on from such simplistic ideas? We may have moved on in the ways we explain, in modern medical terminology, some of the manifestation of disease and sickness, but a brief glance at the newspapers will remind us that the presence of evil is still very much present in our society. The good news of the Gospel is that for individuals with their personal demons, and for societies with their collective additions, Christ can still exorcise these demons. Where? At the Mass and through the other sacraments, through exorcisms, through prayer, fasting and in all the other ways that Jesus brought his kingdom nearer and routed Satan.

God Bless

PRAYER FOR A SPIRITUAL COMMUNION

My Jesus, I believe that You are present in this Holy Sacrament of the altar.

I love You above all things and I passionately desire to receive You into my soul.

Since I cannot now receive You sacramentally, come spiritually into my soul so that I may unite myself wholly to You now and forever. Amen

Based on a prayer of St Alphonsus Liguori
